A JOURNEY THROUGH ART, HISTORY AND CULTURE
Verona and its Piazza Bra are dominated by the imposing Roman Arena, built in the 1st century AD. C., one of the best preserved Roman amphitheatres. To the south-east of the square there's the neoclassical Palazzo Barbieri, today's seat of the Commune, built in the seventeenth century for military use. To the south of the square there's the Palace of the Grand Guard recently restored and today it houses of important exhibitions. From Piazza Bra, going via Mazzini on the left you can see and visit the courtyard of the Giulietta House with the suggestive balcony. Then you arrive at Piazza delle Erbe, an ancient Roman forum, known for the daily fruit and vegetable market. Next to Piazza dei Signori: from here you can see the nearby Arche Scaligere and enter the Old Market Courtyard, from which you can access the Torre dei Lamberti, where you can admire a spectacular view of the city. Continuing on the Adige and flanking the river you reach Ponte Pietra, where on the other side stands the Roman Theater, which in summer hosts important theatrical performances and ballets.
